Welcome Amber Finley LPN

I'm from Atlanta, GA. I live in Easley with my husband and my daughter, and our 2 boxers. My oldest daughter lives in Clemson. I moved to Greenville in the mid-90s when my father took over as 3rd generation owner of a small Greenville restaurant. I have been a nurse for 12 years, with a focus on nurse management and diabetes education. Previously working for GHS and AnMed health. In our spare time we are on the softball field, where my husband coaches a faith-based travel team.

I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to care for the residents at Waterstone on Augusta, and strive to enrich their lives through love, faith, and dedication to provide the highest standard of care.

Wild Guesswork

There may be no prize for guessing what holiday falls on April 15, but you'd be right if you guessed Take a Wild Guess Day. It is no fluke that this holiday coincides with Tax Day in the United States. Take a Wild Guess Day inventor Jim Barber wanted to celebrate the random nature of wild guessing in contrast to the exact science of filing taxes. It turns out that this is the perfect day to follow hunches, leap to conclusions, and not listen to reason. You can celebrate by filling a jar with jelly beans and guessing the amount. After all, what's the worst that can happen if you take a wild guess? A wild guess may be better than no guess at all. Jim Barber acted on a hunch that his holiday would be a hit. Guess what? He was right.

MOVIES

Please note we show movies three times a week. That's every other Tuesday and every Thursday and Sunday. If you have suggestion as to what you would like to watch. Reach out to Santino, Michelle or Denise.

Get Things Rolling

On Monday, April 22, Americans will enjoy an annual Easter tradition by rolling Easter eggs on the South Lawn of the White House. The Easter egg roll is one of the White House's oldest annual events. While informal egg-rolling parties may have been held at the White House as far back as Abraham Lincoln's administration, it was Dolley Madison who first suggested a public egg roll, not at the White House but at the U.S Capitol in 1872. Landscaping concerns led Congress to ban the practice in 1878, but legend has it that angry citizens stormed the White House gates and demanded that children be allowed to roll their eggs. President Rutherford B. Hayes had little choice but to open the South Lawn of the White House, and the event has taken place there ever since. The celebration has evolved over the years. Egg croquet was once popular, and John Phillip Sousa once played for the crowd. In 1933, Eleanor Roosevelt greeted rollers over a national radio broadcast, and in 1974, the egg-rolling race was initiated, with contestants using spoons from the White House kitchen. While the event has been canceled due to inclement weather or even in times of war, Americans may rest assured that come Easter Monday, eggs will roll at the White House.

Breaking Baseball's Color Line

Each year, Major League Baseball honors Jackie Robinson by celebrating April 15 as Jackie Robinson Day. Back in 1947, April 15 was opening day, and young Jackie Robinson made his debut for the Brooklyn Dodgers. Robinson went an unmemorable 0-3, only reaching base on a throwing error, yet he made history as the first African American to play in the big leagues. His debut ended 80 years of segregation in the game. Less than 10 years later, the percentage of black players on Major League teams matched or exceeded that of the general population. Robinson was not only a Hall-of-Fame player but an American cultural hero. Each year on April 15, players don Robinson's universally retired number 42 to honor the courageous man who broke baseball's "color line."

The Ballad of John Parker

On April 19, 1775, a farmer and mechanic named John Parker rallied his militia of farmers against a battalion of 700 British troops. The British were on the march to Concord, Massachusetts, in search of weapons and supplies hidden by the American colonists. As the "red coats" approached, Parker's men stood their ground in Lexington, on the road to Concord. They were under Parker's strict orders not to shoot. After all, the Revolutionary War had not started yet. Alas, a fateful shot was fired, the now-famous "shot heard round the world," and the American War for Independence began. No one knows who fired first, but in that first skirmish, eight militiamen were killed and 10 wounded. On the British side, only one was wounded. Today, a statue known as The Lexington Minuteman stands on the Lexington Battle Green. It represents John Parker and every other brave soldier who fought for American independence.

Singing Machine

The fourth week in April is Karaoke Week! So grab a microphone and belt out your favorite song. If you're looking for an audience, then you're in luck. Bars and clubs all over the world will be hosting karaoke contests and competitions. If you're feeling a bit shy, then perhaps the story of karaoke's inventor will help you find the confidence to come out of your shell.

Karaoke was invented in Japan. The word karaoke is actually a combination of two Japanese terms: kara, meaning "empty," and oke, which is the shortened form of okesutora, meaning "orchestra." What is an "empty orchestra"? This is another way of describing an orchestra that has a lead part missing, and that lead part is the all-important voice of the singer. Sing-alongs have been an important part of Japanese get-togethers for centuries. But it wasn't until 1971 that musician Daisuke Inoue invented a machine that could do the work of an entire band. Inoue was a drummer and not a very good one at that. When he couldn't make it in a band, he found work playing drums for Japanese businessmen who liked to sing during amateur nights. When one businessman asked Inoue to play backup at another event, Inoue declined the invitation but came up with another idea. Inoue taped his drum solo so that the singer could play the tape and sing along in his absence. It wasn't long before Inoue realized the genius of this idea and invented a machine fitted with amplifiers and background music that allowed singers to perform without a full band. Inoue leased his machines to local bars, where they were an instant hit. Karaoke was born. By the 1980s, it seemed that every bar in Japan had a karaoke machine. Unfortunately for Inoue, he never patented his invention and so never earned a cent. It was a Filipino inventor named Roberto del Rosario who claimed that honor. However, Inoue's name has entered the history books for his efforts. In 2004, he even was awarded a mock "Peace Prize" for inventing a machine that brings
